How to Use This Book

This is an unofficial supplement designed to help you run Vampires in the dark and perilous world of Warhammer Fantasy Roleplay Fourth Edition. The rules are largely adapted from Night's Dark Masters, and that book will provide essential setting material that is not present here.

This unofficial fan supplement also requires the rules from the Warhammer Fantasy Roleplay Fourth Edition core rulebook. Characteristics, Skills, Talents and Traits described therein are not described here.

A note on Vampire player characters

Vampires, by their age and background, are necessarily more powerful than starting characters of other playable races. In general, the books do not recommend that you allow Vampires as player characters. That said, the rules to play Vampires as PCs have been available since the second edition, and this supplement gives you the same set of options through a fourth edition lens. It is recommended that if you do opt for a Vampire character, you should play in an all-Vampire group. Vampires are more advanced than Humans, Dwarfs, Halflings or Elves. Vampire NPCs should be even more powerful than this, representing their decades (or centuries) of unlife, and use the baseline stats in the core rulebook with a selection of optional Traits or at least two Careers.

If playing in a mixed group, your fellow players should take an extra 3 Talents from the Random Talents Table in the core book and +500xp to help them round out their characters. This balances against the benefits of the 5 Blood Gifts and the Bite, Claw, Dark Vision, Fear and Painless Traits (the others not necessarily being beneficial) all Vampires receive. If using the Optional Step: Mortal Life to provide Skills, Talents, Class and Career from the Vampire's Human days, then extra Advances should likewise be given to mortal players.

It is recommended that if you are creating Vampires as PCs at the start of a game, you go through the full Character Creation method detailed immediately below. If you are converting existing PCs to Vampires, you should use the shorter section Converting Existing Characters to modify your existing Human character. Non-Human Vampires are not playable character types (mostly because they are impossible or are so rare that they may as well be). Both of these processes will create Vampire PCs that are closer to the level of an Elf PC, in terms of Characteristics, than the NPCs presented in the core rulebook, and this is intentional. These Vampires are expected to be inexperienced, younger and less powerful. They represent Vampires turned (at the very most) within the last few years. As they rapidly grow into their Undead bodies, however, they can be expected to become exceptionally lethal creatures.

Character Creation: The Randomisation Method

Step	Rules
Bloodline	Select Bloodline
Attributes	Roll 2d10 and add the bonuses for each Characteristic; note Wounds, Resilience and

	Movement
Skills	Allocated 3 x 3 Advances and 3 x 5 Advances among 6 Species Skills and 6 Bloodline Skills
Talents	Take 5 Bloodline Talents
Blood Gifts	Take 2 Species Blood Gifts and 1 Bloodline Blood Gift
Traits	Record 9 Traits
Vampire Career	Select Vampire Career; distribute +5 Characteristics, +40 Skills Advances and one Talent
Weaknesses	Select 5 Weaknesses plus Sunlight, or take 6 Bloodline Weaknesses
Optional Step: Mortal Life	Take Human Skills and Talents, Career and Class

Species

Vampire Player Characters always start out as Humans. Though Vampires of other Species have sometimes been whispered about, no one has ever confirmed the existence of any non-Human Vampires. It is known Elves die in exceptional agony if any Vampire ever tries to convert them with the Blood Kiss, while Dwarfs and Halfling Vampires are a mystery best left unexplored. If you're playing a Vampire, you're already special enough that you don't need to be a Dwarf or Halfling as well.

Roll	Bloodline
01-15	Blood Dragon
16-40	Lahmian
41-45	Necrarch
46-55	Strigoi
56-75	Von Carstein
76-00	Independent

Bloodline

Vampires usually belong to the same Bloodline as their sires, unless they were abandoned in the early stages of their transformation or rejected their Bloodline (becoming Independents). You may choose from the following Bloodlines: the fallen warriors known as Blood Dragons; the seductive and corrupting Lahmians; the ghastly warlocks known as Necrarchs; the hulking beasts known as Strigoi; the imperious fiends called the Von Carsteins; or the unaffiliated and rejected Independents. Alternatively, you may roll 1d100 and randomly assign your Bloodline as per the table above. If you randomly assign your Bloodline, take +25xp.

Attributes

Start by rolling 2d10 to calculate each of your Characteristics. Add the modifiers on the Attributes Table below. If you accept the dice results, in the order you rolled them, you can take +50xp. If you rearrange the dice results to better suit your character concept, instead take +25xp. For +0XP, you may roll again and swap the results around, or allocate 100 points across all 10 Characteristics as you see fit (with a minimum of 4 and a maximum of 18 in any one Characteristic).

Fate & Fortune, Resilience & Resolve

Being Undead, Vampires resist the tides of Fate, and as such, they do not have either Fate or Fortune. To make up for it, however, they do have extra Resilience and Resolve. This reflects their supernatural wills, which can ignore even the most grievous of injuries or deleterious of psychological stresses. Though they cannot avoid sudden death, per se, they can use a point of Resilience to win the Opposed Test that would otherwise kill them, and the Revenant Blood Gift confers the chance to rise again from fatal wounds.

Movement

Vampires are swift and rapacious hunters; as such, they are faster than most other humanoids. Their base movement is 6 (12 yards) with a running speed of 12 (24 yards). It's best not to try to flee from a Vampire — they can usually outrun the swiftest athletes.

Skills

Like Humans, Vampires may allocate 5 Advances to 3 Skills and 3 Advances to 3 Skills (these may be the same 3 Skills, if you choose). You have 12 Skills to choose from at this stage: 6 common Species Skills and 6 additional Skills defined by your Bloodline.

Skills: Dodge, Intimidate, Language (Any), Melee (Basic), Perception, Stealth, plus 6 from your Bloodline list.

Talents

You also take 5 Talents from your Bloodline list.

Blood Gifts

Additionally, you receive special Vampire-only Talents called Blood Gifts. Two of these are common to all Vampires and one is chosen from your Bloodline's list. See the section on Blood Gifts for more information.

Blood Gifts: Natural Necromancer, Pass for Human*, plus one from your Bloodline list

*Instead of Pass for Humans, Necrarchs gain the Blood Gift Walking Death and Animosity (The Living); Strigoi instead gain the Blood Gift Blood Fury and Animosity (Other Bloodlines).

Traits

Being Undead, Vampires also receive 9 free Traits. These are part of their Undead heritage and cannot be purchased by the living. Ghouls, though technically still alive, count as Undead Creatures for the purposes of receiving Traits. You generally cannot buy new Traits, although Age increases with time and Fear often increases as a result of Talents and Blood Gifts. Your natural weapons (Bite and Weapon (Claw)) also scale with your Strength Bonus.

Traits: Age 2, Bite (+SB+3), Claw (+SB+3), Dark Vision, Fear 1, Night's Curse, Painless, Undead, Vampiric

New Trait: Age

All Vampires learn to feed more efficiently with time. This is determined by your Age. The older you are, the longer your Feeding Interval. Time spent sleeping during the day does not count. If your Feeding Interval is in hours, you need to feed after a number of hours equal to your Toughness Bonus, excluding those spent asleep. For example, Radu Rabinoff has TB6 and is 11 months Undead, so he must feed every 6 nights. If he had been 1 week Undead, he would need to feed every 6 hours, excluding sleeping time. Your Age Trait is not static and increases in line with the time you have spent Undead.

New Trait: Claw (Rating)

Claw attacks operate like Weapon attacks used with Melee (Brawling). The creature may, on its turn, choose to attack with its claws if it is not holding anything in its primary hand. The damage done is equal to the Rating (which already includes the creature's Strength Bonus). If a creature has more than one free arm, it may use Dual Wielder to attack with both.

Age	Time Undead	Feeding Interval
1	Up to 6 Weeks	Hours
2	Up to 1 Year	Nights
3	Up to 10 Years	Weeks
4	Up to 100 Years	Months
5	Over 100 Years	4 Months

New Trait: Night's Curse

All Vampires possess Night's Curse. You take 6 Vampire Weaknesses, as determined by your Bloodline, though you may mitigate any two by taking Blood Gifts. You may take Sunlight and randomise 5 additional Weaknesses, if you prefer. See Weaknesses for more information.

Optional Trait: Fury

Literature is full of Vampires that viciously attack their enemies and kill whole villages with their rapacious hunger. If you like the idea of bloodthirsty monsters able to launch into violence at a moment's notice, you may give all Vampires the Fury Trait. This gives Vampires a powerful option for dealing with enemies in combat, but may lead to terrible acts of murder as the Vampire's beastly nature takes over. Note that Strigoi, who usually take the Frenzy Trait instead of Pass for Human, should take another Blood Gift from their Bloodline list instead, as Fury also imparts the ability to Frenzy.

Career

You can also now pick a Vampire Career. Roll 1d100 and consult the Vampire Career tables for each Bloodline or select from each Bloodline's Preferred Careers list. Each Bloodline has a small selection of favoured Careers which usually favour particular Classes (you are unlikely to find any Von Carsteins who would wilfully become Peasants, for instance). As such, you only need to randomise the Career rather than both Class and Career.

In your Vampire Career, assign 5 Characteristic Advances, 40 Skill Advances and one Talent. Again, you may want to consider which Skills and Talents you get for being a Vampire too. You gain 25xp for randomising this step and taking the first outcome. If you choose your Career, you take no bonus xp.

Though the Careers listed for each Bloodline may share the name of standard Careers (e.g., Duellist or Pit Fighter), they use the Alternate Career rules in the Vampire Careers section, below. Like the specialist, Vampire-Only Careers, these Alternate Careers have Blood Gifts associated with each level. Though you are certainly free to customise any Career for your own table (Vampire Pirates? If you insist...), only those listed for each Bloodline below are Preferred Careers. If you choose one of your Bloodline's Preferred Careers, you may purchase one additional Blood Gift per Career Level.

Weaknesses

All Vampires have six Weaknesses, including Sunlight and five others. You may take your Bloodline Weaknesses, as listed above. Alternatively, you may take Sunlight and randomise the remaining 5 Weaknesses (+20XP). To randomise your Weaknesses, roll 1d100 and consult the table below to determine your curses. Sunlight is a mandatory Weakness, though it is somewhat mitigated by Defy the Dawn.

Certain Blood Gifts may remove or counteract your Weaknesses, in which case, the Blood Gifts supercede the Weaknesses. No Vampire can, through Blood Gifts or other means, have fewer than 4 Vampire Weaknesses. If you roll a Blood Gift that would reduce you below 4 Weaknesses, you may re-roll that Blood Gift or pick one from your Bloodline list.

Vampires also have the Vampiric and Undead Traits. These have weaknesses associated with them but these weaknesses cannot be removed. Being Vampiric and Undead is part of your nature. To remove them would be to cure the Vampire of what it is.

Barriers
You may not cross the threshold of any dwelling owned by another without first being invited. Once you are invited, you can come and go as you please. Non-residential properties do not count for the purposes of this weakness. Your home when you were mortal has no barrier, provided no other family has moved in. This weakness is especially common in Necrarchs.

Blessed Weapons
Blessed weapons gain the Damaging Quality against you. Holy water also harms you, inflicting 1d10 damage per turn of contact, which is modified by your Toughness Bonus and Armour as usual, to a minimum of 1 Wound per turn. Religious items pressed to your skin inflict 1 Wound per turn, which ignores Toughness Bonus or Armour.

Counting
You are cursed to count small, numerous items spread across the ground before you. This may include grains of rice, marbles or seeds. Once you have seen the items, you cannot change course or try to walk away from them. Naturally occurring items, such as piles of pebbles and scree, do not count, and neither do piles of grain stored or placed for other reasons. Only items intentionally spread on the floor by another for this purpose alone will work. Counting the items takes 1d10 minutes unless you spend a point of Resolve to tear yourself away. If you are at imminent risk of attack or injury, you may choose to make a Challenging (+0) Cool Test to tear yourself away from the items instead. If you fail this Test, anyone attacking you while your attention is focused on the items does so as if you had the Stunned Condition.

Daemonsroot and Witchbane
You must pass a Challenging (+0) Cool Test to come within 2 yards of these herbs.

Fire
Fire of any kind ignores your Toughness Bonus for the purposes of causing damage, although armour protects you as normal.

Garlic
You take a -20 penalty to all Tests within 6 yards of garlic.

Gromril and Ithilmar
Blows made with a weapon of Ithilmar or Gromril ignore your Toughness Bonus.

No Reflection
You cast no reflection or shadow. Anyone who sees this can make an Average (+20) Intuition Test to deduce that you are a Vampire, although Witch Hunters and Vampire Hunters will immediately know you for what you are.

Religious Symbols
You must make a Challenging (+0) Cool Test to be within 2 yards of religious symbols. The symbol must be earnestly wielded by one who believes in its power, though any religious symbol will do. When attempting to enter a holy place such as a temple or shrine, the difficulty increases to Difficult (-10).

Running Water
Any water that is at least a yard across and a foot deep, and which has a current, evokes Fear 3. This Fear always affects you with its full impact, regardless of whether Fear normally affects you in whole or in part. If you enter such bodies of water, you gain +1 Ablaze Condition per turn, though you are burned by the water, which is like acid to you, rather than by literal flames. You cannot resolve these Conditions with an Athletics Test but once you leave the water they will resolve at the rate of one per turn. If you can cross the water without getting wet (such as if you leap or fly over it, or use a bridge), you take no ill effect. Vampires of the Strigoi Bloodline often suffer from this Weakness.

Sawdust and Embalming Fluid
The materials of the funeral parlour (namely, sawdust or embalming fluid) represent a perceived threat with Terror 1.

Silver
Silver weapons gain the Damaging Quality against you. Silver items are also painful if in contact with your bare skin, inflicting 1 Wound per turn, which ignores Toughness Bonus and Armour.

Soil Sleeper
You can only sleep fully when in the dirt from the lands you called home while still living. You must sleep with at least two handfuls of this dirt every day or you gain +1 Fatigued Condition when you rise in the evening. These Conditions cannot be resolved until you sleep for a full day with two handfuls of your home soil, although you cannot be reduced below 10 in any Characteristic.

Stakes
A stake made of rosewood, ash or hawthorn, if plunged through your heart, will confer the Unconscious Condition. This is only resolved when the stake is removed. Aiming for the heart is a called shot. A minimum of 3 Wounds must be inflicted, after reducing for Toughness Bonus and Armour, to pierce the heart.

Sunlight
All Vampires must take this Weakness, although Defy the Day may reduce its impact. For each minute in full sunlight, you take +1 Poisoned Condition, which cannot be removed until after you seek shelter. After every 10 minutes in shelter, you will lose 1 Poisoned Condition until all are resolved. On overcast days, where cloud cover is 80% complete or more, you only gain +1 Poisoned Condition per hour. If you reach +5 Poisoned Conditions from sunlight at any time, you also immediately gain +1 Broken Condition and must seek shelter. Each time you take damage from sunlight, you must also make a successful Challenging (+0) Endurance Test or gain +1 Ablaze Condition as well, as your Vampiric flesh ignites in the rays of the sun.

Tears
The sight of freshly flowing tears from an innocent disturbs you. If the person is particularly vulnerable, holy or just, as determined by the GM, you must make an Extended Challenging (+0) Cool Test to attack or harm them, gaining more SLs than their Fellowship Bonus.

Warpstone
You must make a Challenging (+0) Cool Test to come within 6 yards of Warpstone. After an hour in its presence, you must re-roll one Blood Gift and one Weakness, which change permanently.

Optional Step: Mortal Life

Mortal Skills and Talents

If your GM allows it, you may take the Skills, Talents, Career and Class of a Human to represent the Human life you have left behind. Start with the Skills and Talents from the Human Species list. Put 5 Advances in 3 Skills and 3 Advances in 3 Skills, as a Human would. For Talents, take Doomed and either Savvy or Suave, but do not roll 3 Random Talents (your Vampire Talents more than make up for this).

If playing in a mixed group, your GM should allow non-Vampire players to take additional Advances in either their Species or Career lists, too. For example, Rosie is playing Varel, a Wood Elf Entertainer (Ranger). She is offered extra Advances to match the Vampire player in her group, and so she puts 5 Advances each in Entertain (Sing), Perception and Ranged (Bow), which are all Species Skills; 3 Advances in Stealth (Rural), another Species Skill; and 3 Advances each Charm and Sleight of Hand, both Career Skills. Next she takes 2 extra Talents. She already has Attractive, as her starting Career Talent, so takes Mimic and Suave from her Career list.

Mortal Class and Career

In order to represent your past mortal life, your GM may also allow you to take one complete Career Level in a random Human Career. Select the Class and Career as normal, then take 15 Characteristic Advances, 40 Skill Advances and one Talent to complete the first level.

If playing in a mixed group, your fellow players should likewise receive enough Advances to complete the first level of their Career. They should take an extra +10 Characteristic Advances to complete this first Career Level, and then should take a second Career Level of their choice for free, in which they should take 5 Characteristics Advances, 40 Skills and one Talent. This does not need to be the second level of their starting Career; they may switch to any Career they choose, and do not need to pay for moving Careers.

Additionally, they still receive an extra 3 Talents from the Random Talents Table in the core book and +300xp to help them round out their characters.

Character Creation: Converting Existing Characters

	Summary
Step	Rules
Bloodline	Choose sire's Bloodline or select Independent
Attributes	Add the Vampire Template to Attributes
Talents	Remove 6 Species (Human) Talents; replace with 2 Species (Vampire) Talents and 4 Bloodline Talents
Blood Gifts	Take 2 Species Blood Gifts and 1 Bloodline Blood Gift
Traits	Record 7 Traits (Age starts at 1)
Vampire Career	Randomly select Bloodline Career; distribute +5 Advances among Characteristics immediately, give 400xp for Skills, and gain one Career Talent immediately
Weaknesses	Randomly select 5 Weaknesses and take Sunlight, or take 6 Bloodline Weaknesses

Species Skills and Talents

You immediately gain access to the 12 Skills and 6 Talents available to a Vampire of your Bloodline. Take all 6 Talents and gain 240xp to divide among your Vampire Species and Bloodline Skills as you wish. If you had the Doomed Talent, this possible future peels away with your Fate Points, as the Fates themselves shun your foul spirit.

Blood Gifts

You should now take 2 Species Blood Gifts and 1 Bloodline Blood Gift. Take your 7 Traits (Age starts at 1, if you are freshly turned) and choose or randomise 5 Weaknesses in addition to Sunlight.

Vampire Career

You should select your Vampire Career from your Bloodline's Preferred Careers list. Your GM may allow you to choose a Career outside this list, but it will limit the number of Blood Gifts you can take.

Once you have chosen your Vampire Career, you should take +5 Advances to Career Characteristics and one Career Talent, reflecting the sudden knowledge and awareness that comes with your Vampire awakening. You do not gain extra Skills but do gain 400xp to buy Career Skills over the next month of game time, as you rapidly adapt to your newfound abilities. Spending these xp should involve one or more Endeavours detailing your learning and experimentation with your Vampire body.

Systems for Undeath

Bonds of Blood

The ties of blood are strong. Vampires must feed to survive, and their bloody nature has a number of limitations, benefits and complications. These are detailed below.

The Blood Is the Life

The blood is the life. It is the heart of Vampiric existence and forms a basis of Undead power known to Undead scholars as the Unbreakable Constant. In other words, life taken equals unlife regained. Blood consumption is thus measured in Wounds: for every Wound taken while feeding, you regain 1 Wound. The blood needn't be taken forcefully; a willing mortal may cut themselves and share blood on a 1 Wound for 1 Wound basis. A small cut restores a tiny fraction of your power but may be enough to sustain you in the short term; a bigger sacrifice provides more power in return. A Vampire with 0 Wounds also has no blood, and so cannot bleed.

Because Vampires must steal life, you usually need to feed from the living, unless you have the Parasite Blood Gift or certain Necromantic spells. See Feeding for more information on the specifics of feeding.

The Blood Kiss

If a Human victim is reduced to 0 Wounds through feeding, they fall unconscious, on the cusp of death. At this point, you may return a small portion of blood (1 Wound's worth) and turn your victim into a Vampire.

The body will lie dead for 1d10 days and then rise again as a Vampire. When your new child awakens, they will have regained all their Wounds, and will take the Characteristic bonuses, Skills, Talents and Traits detailed in the Character Creation Method below. They will also have the Ravenous Condition and +1 Hungry Condition for every night they took to rise.

Weak minds are often broken by the Blood Kiss. Any individual given the Blood Kiss who has a Willpower of less than 30 must roll a Challenging (+0) Cool Test. A failure means the individual rolls once on the Mental Corruption Table. A fumble means they roll twice and take both effects.

Conditions

You are hardier than mortals. Because you have the Painless Trait, you ignore all but amputation penalties from Critical Wounds. This has a knock-on effect, meaning you are less likely to take Conditions from injury. You should, however, be wary of Vampire Weaknesses and hunger, which cause Conditions of their own.

Any Bleeding and Fatigued Conditions can be removed by feeding, as if each was 1 Wound, though this may not always be the most efficient way to do so. These Conditions are healed before any damage, and Critical Wounds are healed last of all (read Critical Wounds below).

Furthermore, Bleeding Conditions can never kill a Vampire. If you ever reach 0 Wounds due to Bleeding Conditions, you must immediately resolve all Bleeding Conditions — your blood having dried up along with your last Wound — and gain instead the Unconscious Condition.

If you have any Stunned Conditions, or the Unconscious Condition while at 0 Wounds, and are fed 1 Wound's worth of blood, you will immediately resolve one of these Conditions (Unconscious always resolves first). In this way, helpful allies can revive you even after you have fallen in battle.

If you are awakened during the day, you will gain a Fatigued Condition when the Unconscious Condition resolves, as normal, and this cannot be removed unless you return to sleep until sunset. See Sleep, below.

All Conditions caused by Vampire Weaknesses — such as Poisoned or Broken Conditions caused by Sunlight, or Ablaze Conditions caused by Running Water — can only be resolved as per the description of those Weaknesses. Likewise, Conditions caused by a Vampire's appetites — Hungry and Ravenous — can only be resolved as per the Feeding rules below.

Corruption

When you gain Mental or Physical Corruption, these are an expression of your warped, magical physiology, rather than any claim upon your body or soul by the Chaos Gods. This means you can never take Dark Deals but you can rest assured that your cursed soul is entirely your own, and will never be claimed by any God — for good or bad.

Critical Hits

Vampires can heal Critical Wounds through the use of the Vampiric Trait, the Unholy Regeneration Blood Gift, or magic. So long as your heart and brain are intact, you can heal any Critical Wound that doesn't destroy one or both of these organs. Typically, a small injury (a missing ear or finger) is healed as if it were 10 Wounds and a lost limb is healed as if it were 20 Wounds.

When you take a Critical Wound caused by a Vampire Weakness, you must pass a Challenging (+0) Cool Test or gain 1 Corruption Point. If you fumble the roll, you take 2 Corruption Points.

If your brain or heart is destroyed, your Vampiric body begins to decay to the state that it would be in had you died when you were turned. You are only able to be revived through Necromancy. Legend has it that the most powerful Vampires can only be destroyed by other Vampires of equal prowess, and that even destroying the brain and heart is not enough for such monstrous immortals.

Ennui

The Melancholy of Ages is a growing ennui that affects very old Vampires. After each century of unlife, you must make a Challenging (+0) Cool Test to avoid developing a new Mental Corruption. The GM may modify the difficulty depending on how isolated, detached or inactive the Vampire was.

Esteem

As a Vampire, you must maintain your esteem in an identical fashion to the Elf Esteem Endeavour. The Vampire Esteem Endeavour represents reporting to masters or managing servants, honing your Blood Gifts, securing your domain, and maintaining alternate identities. Strigoi and Independents, often being loners or abject scum, may not need to engage in such Endeavours if the GM deems this unnecessary.

Feeding

All Vampires feel the thirst for blood. The amount of blood taken is measured in Wounds inflicted (see the Vampiric Trait, WFRP4e, p.343). An adequate feed to satisfy this thirst would heal all your current Wounds (with a minimum of 3 Wounds inflicted upon your target). The time between feedings is a number of Feeding Intervals equal to your Toughness Bonus (see New Trait: Age). You do not need to feed during the day when you are sleeping. The oldest Vampires may be able to deny the hunger for blood for years, but no one has got close enough to document this, for obvious reasons.

If you have not fed for a number of Feeding Intervals equal to your Toughness Bonus, you must make a Challenging (+0) Cool Test or gain +1 Hungry Condition. Each single Feeding Interval after this that you deny yourself, you must continue to pass Challenging (+0) Cool Tests until you feed (the penalties to Willpower Bonus apply here too, so that it becomes increasingly difficult to deny your hunger). Each failed roll adds +1 Hungry Condition. Once you reach +5 Hungry Conditions, you also gain the Ravenous Condition. These Conditions stack and can only be removed by feeding (see Hungry* Condition below).

If you fumble any Cool Test while suffering from the Hungry Condition, you immediately gain the Ravenous Condition (see below) and fall into a bloodthirsty Frenzy, determined to seek out, kill and drain the nearest living being. Unlike a normal Frenzy, the target of your bloody violence does not have to be an enemy — any mortal within reach will do, including loved ones and allies.

New Condition: Hungry

You temporarily gain the Hungry Trait (WFRP4e, p.340). You suffer a -10 penalty to your Fellowship and Willpower, as the hunger makes you look and act more like a monster. In order to resolve this Condition, you must take enough Wounds to heal up to full health, plus 1 Wounds equal per Hungry Conditions you currently have (minimum 3). Hungry Conditions are always resolved after all Wounds have been healed (see Healing below). You cannot spend Resolve to remove the Hungry Condition.

New Condition: Ravenous

Your hunger has now reached epic proportions. Whenever you can sense a viable target to feed from, regardless of whether they are bleeding, you must make a Challenging (+0) Cool Test or Frenzy. During this Frenzy, you will immediately and violently attack any and all viable targets until you are sated. You will not stop until the target is drained dry, causing death. You will continue to attack viable targets until you have removed all Conditions. The Ravenous Condition is always removed last.

Any victim who survives a Vampire feeding attack must pass a Average (+20) Cool Test once they regain their senses or will take one Mental Corruption as a side-effect.

A creature who willingly submits is considered a Helpless Target, but the bliss of unforced feeding is such that they do not need to make a Mental Corruption Test unless the Vampire was particularly violent.

You can continue to drain the blood of your quarry even when you have healed all Wounds, reducing your prey's ability to break free and slowly killing them in the process. These extra Wounds give you no benefit, but this is the first violent step in delivering the Blood Kiss.

Healing

Vampires do not heal as mortals do. They may heal only by using the Vampiric Trait, the Unholy Regeneration Blood Gift, or through the use of Dark Magic. Spending 1 Resolve to remove the Prone Condition also restores 1 Wound.

If you have Bleeding Conditions, these will always heal first, before any Wounds. 1 Bleeding Condition can be healed as if it were 1 Wound instead. Bleeding Conditions healed in this way do not cause Fatigued Conditions afterwards.

For example, you have taken 4 Wounds and 2 Bleeding Conditions. You spend 1 Advantage to make a free Bite attack and deal 2 Wounds after Toughness Bonus and Armour Points. Ordinarily, you would heal 2 Wounds, but as you have 2 Bleeding Conditions, you heal these first.

See also Critical Wounds, above.

Hunger

Vampires' unnatural hunger means they are vulnerable to the Hungry and Ravenous Conditions.

Fortitude

You are resistant to the effects of violence, torture and suffering. These do not affect your Psychology or cause Mental Corruption. Likewise, failed or fumbled Terror Tests have no long-lasting consequences either.

As a result of your Vampiric nature, you are also immune to Fear up to and including your own Fear Rating. Vampires are also immune to Psychology from their own Undead and Ghoul armies. A Vampire who commands a Terrorgheist does not have to worry about how terrifying it is; you already know and that's why you brought it into battle.

Vampires are typically immune to the effects of most diseases and poisons, but they can become carriers of disease and they can suffer the Poisoned Condition from Sunlight. Carriers of diseases gain the Diseased Blood Gift and may pass this disease onto their victims when feeding. The Resistance (Disease) Talent prevents you from being a carrier, meaning you may never take the Diseased Blood Gift.

Sleep

You find it difficult to stay awake during the day. Vampiric sleep is a death-like state where your body lies like a perfectly preserved corpse.

You can only stay awake a maximum of a number of hours past sunrise equal to half your Willpower Bonus, but doing so requires a Challenging (+0) Endurance Test every hour. So if you have WPB 6, you can remain awake for 3 hours after sunrise. After this, you must sleep for at least 8 hours, or you will awaken with +1 Fatigued Condition. You may also rise a number of hours before sunset equal to half your Willpower Bonus.

You only perceive disturbances during the daytime if you pass a Difficult (-10) Perception Test. If you are awakened during the day, you will wake with +1 Fatigued Condition and direct sunlight will of course affect you as usual. If you fail this time, you remain unawares provided no one harms you. If anyone touches you or comes within 2 yards of where you are sleeping, you will awaken immediately to defend yourself. After

This Fatigued Condition will resolve when you return to sleep or feed. After Willpower Bonus minutes, you will have to pass another Challenging (+0) Endurance Test to stay awake, or feel the crushing weight of deathly sleep, gaining the Unconscious Condition once more. You should repeat this Test at the same interval until you finally return to sleep.

Summoning

Vampires have a natural aptitude for summoning, including calling forth certain living creatures, which is one of the unnatural effects of Dhar upon their bodies and souls. This aptitude can be developed as certain Blood Gifts, such as Summon Vermin. In general, if you can summon a living creature via a Blood Gift, you can intuitively command it for the effect's duration. By channelling your own bestial hunger and rage, you find you are able to sway lesser creatures to attack and feast on living flesh, mirroring your own ravenous appetites. Such creatures do not harm the Undead or Ghouls, recognising their flesh as distasteful (and likely dangerous). More complicated commands will require Charm Animal as usual.

Transformations

Vampires are warped and foul beings, and often take horrid shape as their outsides twist to match their souls. They can sometimes take the form of terrible beasts. When you assume a beast form, you should use the higher of your own Characteristics and those of your new form. The only exceptions are Ballistic Skill and Dexterity, which are limited to your form's ratings. You may take all of the standard Traits for the form and any special rules listed in their profile in the Appendix. You keep your own Skills and Talents, unless bonus Talents are specified for a specific form, but are limited by the physical capabilities of your new shape. Certain activities may prove impossible of your anatomy or appearance does not allow it. For example, a rat will obviously have a hard time charming a maiden, even if it can speak, and while a raven might eventually write a quick note with its nib, if given time, it would find painting a masterpiece impossible.

Undead Eternal

Any Vampire can be resurrected by a sufficiently skilled Necromancer. Morr himself rejects their unhallowed souls, leaving them to wander the chasm between worlds when their bodies are destroyed. They cannot pass on to the afterlife and they often return as ghastly spirits until summoned back into their perverse flesh. This confers +2 SLs on any attempt to revive a Vampire from the dead with Necromancy.

Vampire Careers

Vampire Careers follow. In addition, you will find mundane Careers that can be given to Vampires. These receive the Blood Gifts associated with their relevant Class. For example, a Blood Dragon Knight gets access to the Warrior Blood Gifts.

New Career: Blood Knight (Warriors)

Vampire (Blood Dragons, Von Carstein)

Though your perspective is warped by the Blood Kiss, you hold true to your warrior's code: death or honour, only the strongest shall survive, and only the worthy will be spared.

Blood Knights are the orders of Vampiric warriors who follow twisted paths of chivalry laid down by Abhorash and the Blood Dragons. For you, the whole world is your arena: every exchange is a joust, every conflict a battle. It is your duty to hone yourself to a fine blade's edge and cut through the world with cold purpose. The weak will fall and the unworthy will whet your sword. Occasionally, you find true innocence in the world, and suffer it to live in acquiescence to your deluded honour, but usually you reason that anyone able to be slain deserves it.

Famous among the Blood Knights are the Seneschals, the elite champions of Duke Merovech of Mousillon and Otto von Drak's Drakenhof Templars. More enigmatic are the Knights of the Red Death, who were behind the Massacre of Modruin, and Mallobaude's Knights of the Black Grail. The titles given here are Bretonnian, but the Sylvanians have equivalent terms, such as Vassal instead of Vavasour and Kastellan for Châtelain.

'Ours is a noble and lonely path. I will teach you what I can, but then you must go it alone. Only the world you find and the battles you fight can truly teach you. It is our job to become the mightiest warriors to ever stride the earth, and in the end, only we shall ensure.'

—Ademar the Unquiet, Blood Dragon Voivode

'Mercy is our greatest and rarest weapon. Use it sparingly, and then the chaff shall fall aside for the wheat. Your duty shall be to seek out the worthiest foes and test their mettle. If they survive, they will be stronger for it, and better able to survive still. If they die, then those they leave behind will learn on their behalf. In this way, we improve on what is left and make it more perfect.'
—Gallien Chambaut, The Devil Blade, Blood Dragon Châtelain

'Refuse a challenge? Never! I will run you through and feast on your cleft heart!'
—Osip Hasselvander, Drakenhof Templar

New Career: Ghoul King (Rangers)

Vampire (Strigoi)

Your horrific form is a blessing, for it grants you exceptional strength with which to conquer your enemies.

Ghoul Kings are Strigoi who revel in their disturbing forms. They feed from the dead, dwelling in crypts and graveyards, hiding from their more Human kin — whom they despise for their pretentions. The Ghoul Kings have no delusions of grandeur; they are what they are. As befits their name, they command legions of Ghouls and other ghastly minions, and prefer to take the form of the bat when they transform.

Ghoul Kings are occasionally Necromancers, but they occasionally learn a Dhar-infused version of the Lore of Beasts, whereby they summon only vermin and serpents, commanding the fouler creatures that stalk their graveyards and cavernous lairs. Though the Ghoul Kings lack the warped chivalry of the Blood Dragons, they are exceptional warriors nonetheless.

'You find my face terrifying? Does it remind you of the beast inside yourself? Here, let me free it!'
—Diskittar the Swollen

'We were cast out by those posers and pansies. We were hardened on cold grave stone and cold grave flesh. Let the Von Carsteins have their castles! Let the Lahmians act like sluts in the boudoirs of the Empire! Let the Blood Dragons pretend to serve honour! We are the rightful heirs of the night, and we will command it with brute force if necessary.'
—Rasim Flesch, General of the Banished Ghoul Kings of Mourkain

'For now, we sleep, and we dream. But one day we will rise, and we will make our dreams real again.'
—Urzen the Unrelenting

Alternate Careers

If you take a standard Career as your 'Vampire Career', you can still purchase Blood Gifts the same as if you had rolled up a Blood Knight or Lector. Instead, each Career is presented as an alternate version below.

General principles

Vampires cannot learn the Pray Skill, or the Talents Bless (Divine Lore), Holy Hatred, Holy Visions, Invoke (Divine Lore) or Pure Soul. Your unholy spirit defies the Gods and makes you incapable of ever gaining their blessing. If you have any of these Skills or Talents before becoming a Vampire, you may trade them instead, using the conversion table below.

Likewise, if you choose any Career not listed below which includes any of the following Skills or Talents, you may swap them as follows:

Pray: Channelling (Dhar)
Lore (Theology): Language (Magick)
Bless (Divine Lore): Petty Magic
Invoke (Divine Lore): Arcane Lore (Necromancy)
Holy Hatred: Hatred (Cultists)
Holy Visions: Sixth Sense
Pure Soul: Strong-minded
Etiquette (Cultists): Cat-tongued
Savant (Theology): Savant (Necromancy)

New Talents: Blood Gifts

Blood Gifts are a type of Talent only available to Vampires. You can purchase a new Blood Gift from your Career's list at the same cost as a Talent. Blood Gifts outside your Career cost twice as much.

You are limited in the number of Blood Gifts you may learn, as follows:

- You start with 3 Blood Gifts at character creation.
- You may purchase one additional Blood Gift from your current Career Level for every Talent you have. You may not have more Blood Gifts than you have Talents.
- If your Career is one of your Bloodline's Preferred Careers, you may purchase 1 extra Blood Gift per Career Level you enter, after the first.

Aethyric Cipher
Max: Willpower Bonus
Tests: Any Cool Test to oppose Second Sight
All Second Sight Tests against you are Opposed with Cool. Daemonsroot and Witchbane wards no longer work against you.

Ageless Cunning
Max: Fellowship Bonus
You are an expert at ambushes. Each purchase of this Blood Gift grants +1 Advantage on the first round of any combat, including any Opposed Test to avoid the Surprised Condition.

Armoured Flesh
Max: Toughness Bonus
You now have the Armour Trait with a Rating of 1 AP at each location. Each additional purchase of the Blood Gift increases your Armour Rating by +1 AP. When you deflect Critical Wounds with these APs, you partially destroy the tissues involved. They must be healed as 5 Wounds per AP to be restored. APs are healed evenly across the body, starting with the most injured Hit Location first (or the Hit Location of your choice if all are equally injured). For example: you deflect 2 AP each on your Head and Right Arm, and 3 AP on your Body. You then drink 20 Wounds of blood. You would first heal 1 AP on all Hit Locations, and then would heal the second AP on the Body. All three Hit Locations would now be at -1 AP.

Bait
Max: Fellowship Bonus
You may take a Full Action to make a Challenging (+0) Leadership Test. If successful, any Undead under your command within 12 yards gain +1 Advantage on their next Opposed Test for each level in this Blood Gift.

Bat Form
Max: 2
For a Full Action, you may transform into a bat. Your clothes and possessions are absorbed into your body and reappear when the transformation ends. Transforming back into your normal form is also a Full Action but can be undertaken whenever you like. If you purchase this Blood Gift a second time, you can transform as a Free Action. See the Vampire Bat profile in the Appendix.

Beastly Whisper
Max: Willpower Bonus
Tests: Any Leader Test to command animals
You may speak with animals. More than the animalistic commands issued by Summon Vermin or Summon Wolves, this allows true communication. You can give detailed orders and receive detailed answers. Bestial and lesser creatures communicate in staccato words and images but more intelligent creatures can convey their thoughts and opinions in more eloquent terms.

Belligerent
Max: 1
You gain the Belligerent Trait.

Blademaster
Max: 1
Tests: Any Opposed Melee Test
You are able to predict the blows of your opponents. Each turn, one enemy of your choice counts as having zero advantage for the round. This counts as a Free Action and can be announced at any time before the chosen enemy makes their dice roll. Such enemies do not count towards outnumbering.

Blood Burst
Max: TB
Your blood is sticky and spurts from your injuries. Any enemy who inflicts at least one Wound upon you must succeed on a Challenging (+0) Dodge Test or suffer -20 to any Opposed combat Tests for the next two rounds.

Blood-Sated
Max: 1
Tests: Any Cool Test to resist feeding
You take twice as long as others to get hungry. You may abstain from blood for twice the normal length of time. Beyond this, you only make a Cool Test to avoid feeding every second Feeding Interval.

Bloody Fury
Max: 1
You gain the Fury Trait.

Chill Presence
Max: 1
You gain the Chill Grasp Trait.

Cold-blooded
Max: 1
You gain the Cold-blooded Trait.

Corrosive Blood
Max: 1
You gain the Corrosive Blood Trait.

Corrupted Innocence
Max: 1
You either look so beautiful or so innocent that your enemies have to think twice about striking you. Those who would harm you must win an Opposed Cool/Charm Test in order to do so.

Dark Acolyte
Max: 1
Your Necromancy spells count as having +3 SL against dispelling attempts.

Dark Fate
Max: Willpower Bonus
The dark fates smile upon you. For each level you have in this Blood Gift, you gain +1 Dark Fate Point and +1 Dark Fortune Point. You can spend these as if they were regular Fate and Fortune Points, and the latter refresh as usual. You can only replenish the Dark Fate Points by advancing this Blood Gift again.

Dark Majesty
Max: 1
Tests: Any Leadership Tests to command Undead beings
You may command a number of Undead beings equal to your Willpower Characteristic +30. These beings must be within 100 yards of you but instinctively understand any commands you make via telepathy.

Deathless Minions
Max: 1
Any Undead within 12 yards of you temporarily ignore the Unstable Trait. This Trait returns as soon as they are out of range.

Deathless Vigour
Max: 1
You are a relentless warrior, able to draw on deep reserves of bestial strength. Once per combat encounter, you may spend all Advantage (minimum 1) to invoke Deathless Vigour. For the duration of one full round, you temporarily ignore all Conditions and add a bonus to any Melee damage you inflict equal to the total number of Conditions you ignored.

Deathsight
Max: 1
Tests: Any Charm or Leadership Tests to communicate with ghosts
You can see and perceive ghosts at all times. Ghosts are likewise aware of you, for better or for worse.

Defy the Dawn
Max: 1
If you pass a Challenging (+0) Endurance Test, you may walk in the daylight for a short period of time. You may roll once per hour with a cumulative -10% penalty to resist the deleterious effects of the sun. If you fail, you begin taking damage and suffering the effects of the Sunlight Weakness as normal.

Devil's Cry
Max: 1
You gain the Ghostly Howl Trait.

Diseased (Type)
Max: 1
You are a carrier for a particular disease and gain the Disease Trait. Scurvy Madness is the most frequent contagion, although others can be selected. If you have the Resistance (Disease) Talent, you can never gain this Blood Gift.

Domination
Max: 1
You can attempt to sway the minds of others with an Opposed Cool Test. If you succeed, your opponent will suffer a number of Compulsion Conditions equal to your SLs which can only be resolved by completing your orders.

New Condition: Compulsion

A Compulsion Condition is caused by supernatural effects that sway the mind and emotions. Usually, you resist such effects with Cool (against their Fellowship or Willpower). When under a Compulsion, you have a strong desire to complete the command given to you. The command must be less harmful than being Surprised for a number of turns equal to the SLs rolled. If it isn't, you can opt to be Surprised instead.

For the duration of the Compulsion you are at -10% on all Tests that do not further the aims of the command you have been given. This stacks with multiple incidences of this Condition.

Compulsions resolve automatically when you complete a command to the best of your ability. If you fail to complete your task within an hour, the Condition resolves and you gain 1 Fatigued Condition for each Compulsion resolved. Otherwise, you gain 1 Fatigued Condition total and regain 1 Resolve.

Ethereal Mist
Max: 1
Once per day, you may take a Full Action to transform yourself and any possessions you carry into an eerie vapour. While in this form, you cannot take damage by mundane means and count as having the Ethereal Trait. You drift at your normal movement rate but cannot be dispersed. In order to regain your usual form, you must take another Full Action to do so.

Familiar Form
Max: 1
As a Full Action, you may transform into any animal no larger than a domestic dog. Your possessions transform with you and reappear when you take your usual form. You gain all the traits of this animal, but retain your own Initiative, Intelligence, Willpower, Fellowship and Wounds. You may change back whenever you like and can use this ability as often as you require. For a second purchase of this Blood Gift, the transformation (each way) becomes a Free Action. See the Appendix for details of Vampire Familiars.

Fire Retardant
Max: 1
This Blood Gift allows you to add a bonus to your soak against non-magical fire damage equal to your Toughness Bonus. If you have the Fire Weakness, this allows you to soak fire as normal. If you don't have the Fire Weakness, you effectively double your Toughness Bonus against fire. Ablaze Conditions caused by the Running Water and Religious Symbols Weaknesses are not really caused by fire but by the burning effect of the water, and this Blood Gift has no effect on them. The Ablaze Conditions caused by the Sunlight Weakness and Gromril and Ithilmar Weakness are affected as normal.

Furious Charge
Max: 1
On the first charge attack of any combat encounter, you may ignore all Armour Points if your blow lands.

Glamour
Max: 2
You can make subtle changes to your appearance without a Disguise Kit. You may take a Full Action to make yourself look more attractive (+10 Fellowship), more ugly (+10 Intimidation) or unlike yourself (+10 Entertain (Act)) for a number of minutes equal to your Willpower Bonus. A second purchase allows you, with an hour to study someone and a successful Challenging (+0) Intuition Test, to take on their form. Your physical appearance will convince anyone in passing, although anyone who knows your target very well (a family member or close friend, for instance) may make an Opposed Intuition/Entertain (Act) Test to realise something is amiss. If they win, they can't be sure exactly what's wrong unless they roll 6+ SLs, but they will view you with suspicion and you will take a -10 penalty to all Fellowship Tests against that person.

Hornblower
Max: 1
You are able to channel the darkness in your soul to inspire your allies and frighten your foes. You may take a Full Action to sound your horn. You and every ally who hears this terrible rallying call gains +1 Advantage. The first time you blow your horn in any combat encounter, you and your allies also gain Fear +1.

Host
Max: 1
Your body is infested with horrific insects and vermin. Whenever you lose 2 or more Wounds from a single attack, these vermin are evident in all their repulsive glory. Anyone who witnesses this grotesque display must pass a Challenging (+0) Cool Test as if you had Fear 3. If you already provoke fear, your Fear Rating is 2 higher for the next round instead.

Indefatigable
Max: Toughness Bonus
You may ignore +1 Fatigued Condition for each level of this Talent.

Iron Sinews
Max: 3
You have grown as a result of your power. You are now one Size larger than before. When using Pass as Human, you revert to Medium Size but will be at least a foot taller than you were before. This may be a telltale sign to those who knew you when you were mortal.

Malformed
Max: Toughness Bonus
You have become monstrously disgusting in some way. Whether you are covered in bursting pustules or your skin is rotting away, you may select one Physical Corruption of your choice or create one that suits your character. This is not a sign of Chaos, however, but an extension of your monstrous being. You therefore take no Corruption Points and do not show as Chaos-tainted to those who can perceive such things.

Martial Honour
Max: Fellowship Bonus
Tests: Any Cool Test made while following your code of honour
You follow a warped form of chivalry. Whenever you accept a formal, explicit challenge to battle, you immediately gain +1 Advantage and +1 Resolve, but you must always spend 1 Resolve to refuse a genuine challenge to battle. These bonuses and penalties to Advantage and Resolve do not stack with multiple purchases of this Blood Gift, although the Tests line stacks, as usual.

Mastery over Death
Max: 1
You are a master at commanding the dead. This power gives you +2 SLs on any Language (Magick) Test to reanimate or speak to the dead.

Mind Flayer
Max: 1
You can attempt to break the minds of others with an Opposed Intimidate/Cool Test. If you succeed, your opponent will receive a Fatigued Condition, plus additional Fatigued Conditions for every +2 SLs. If you score +6 SLs, your opponent gains 1 Broken Condition instead.

Monstrous Glory
Max: 1
You are truly immense in the moment of your bloody victory. Whenever you slay an enemy, any of their allies within Willpower Bonus yards of you must pass a Challenging (+0) Cool Test or take a Broken Condition.

Monstrous Mass
Max: 2
You are so huge and monstrous, even Critical Wounds do you less injury. Any opponent rolling a Critical Wound against you must roll twice and take the lower result. At Age 4, you may purchase this Blood Gift a second time, in which case it also grants the Painless Trait.

Natural Necromancer
Max: 1
You may intuitively command the Undead and Ghouls, even if you do not possess Necromancy. You can control any beings summoned with Blood Gifts or Necromancy with a Challenging (+0) Leadership Test. Most Undead and Ghouls will not resist your commands, though exceptionally powerful Undead might, if the GM deems fit. If you do learn Necromancy, you do not suffer miscasts from rolling doubles on successful Channelling (Dhar) Tests or Language (Magick) Tests using Dhar.

Nehekharan Scroll (Spell)
Max: 1
You possess a scroll detailing a spell from the Lores of Death or Necromancy. By reading the scroll, you may cast the spell as if you had learned it, using the rules for grimoires. This Blood Gift can be purchased afresh for each individual spell (i.e., every purchase is always 100XP). The scroll must be on your person to perform the spell but multiple scrolls can be combined into one grimoire.

Night Witch
You add Language (Magick) and Channelling (Dhar) to any Career you enter; if they are already in your Career, you may purchase these Skills for 5 xp fewer per Advance.

Noble Descent
Max: Fellowship Bonus
Your range of influence over the Undead extends to 200 yards. Each additional purchase extends the range by +100 yards.

Parasite
Max: 1
You have had desperate times and endured them. You may feed on dead flesh and blood to nourish yourself. The taste is not pleasant, and you can never enjoy it, but you need not prey on the living to stave off your hunger. Additionally, vermin and insects can be devoured to satisfy your hunger too.

Pass for Human
Max: 1
You can take on a human appearance. Your features soften, your fangs and claws retract, any deformities temporarily vanish, and you lose any Fear and Terror Traits. Switching between forms is a Free Action that can be performed as many times as you like.

Persistent Image
Max: 1
You retain a reflection and a shadow.

Piercing Strike
Max: 1
Whenever you score a Critical Wound against an opponent, you may roll twice and take the higher result.

Predator of the Night
Max: 1
When attacking from shadows, you may use Stealth in place of Melee on all Opposed Tests.

Psychic Drain
Max: 1
Each round, as a Free Action, you may make an Opposed Cool Test against any living beings within 8 yards (you should roll once with each opponent also rolling once and attempting to match or exceed your SLs).You steal 1 Wound from each opponent who loses against you, plus an additional Wound for every +2 SLs by which you beat them.

Quickblood
Max: Agility Bonus
Tests: Dodge Tests against missile attacks
You can now choose to use Dodge to evade missile attacks, even those that cannot ordinarily be dodged.

Quicksilver
Max: 1
You can move so quickly you always act first in combat if using Melee, as if you attacked with a weapon with the Fast Quality. If another combatant has a Fast weapon, they attack after you. If two Vampires both have Quicksilver, the Vampire with the higher Initiative goes first.

Ravening Beast
Max: Initiative Bonus
You may enter Frenzy if you can see or smell fresh blood within 16 yards. Each additional purchase of this Blood Gift extends the range cumulatively by +16 yards.

Revenant
Max: 1
If you reach 0 Wounds, you may immediately make an Endurance Test to regain 1 Wound and regain consciousness.

Ruler of the Night
Max: 3
Your Undead allies and minions are protected by your dark presence. They gain the Ward (9+) Trait against non-magical damage if within Willpower Bonus yards of you. Each additional purchase of this Blood Gift decreases the Ward Rating by 1.

Scent Blood
Max: 1
You can smell fresh blood within 16 yards, even if it is not yet spilled. No living creature within 16 yards of you may disguise this scent. Spells and mundane concealment of that creature or its blood fail automatically against you.

Silvered Blood
Max: 1
Silver weapons do no additional damage to you. They behave like any other weapon. You cannot take this Blood Gift if you also possess Defy the Day, and vice versa.

Slow Death
Max: 1
Your teeth and claws harbour some nasty surprises. When you attack using these methods, your victim's wounds may kill them slowly. You gain the Infected Trait.

Stench
Max: 1
You smell of rot, flesh and decay. You gain the Distracting Trait.

Summon Ancients
Max: Willpower Bonus
When casting Raise the Dead, Reanimate, Spell of Awakening or Summon Mount, you count as having +2 SLs on a successful Test for each level in this Blood Gift. This can be used, as per the spell description, as an Overcast to increase the number of minions summoned. E.g., for Raise the Dead, each level can be used to summon an extra SL Skeletons; for Reanimate, each level can be used to summon an extra Willpower Bonus + SL Skeletons or Zombies.

Summon Ghouls
Max: 1
You unleash a bellowing cry that travels far and wide. With it, you summon any ghouls within hearing range with a Challenging (+0) Leadership Test. A number of ghouls equal to your SLs will be summoned from the nearby area. They will arrive in a number of rounds equal to half the units die of your Test. They act on your initiative round in combat and obey your orders. They will wander off after a number of hours equal to your Willpower Bonus.

Summon Vermin
Max: 1
You unleash a high-pitched cry that travels far and wide, and must make a Challenging (+0) Leadership Test. You summon a swarm of Giant Rats, Giant Spiders, or Snakes from the nearby area. Use the standard profile for the creature type with the added Swarm Trait. Each +2 SLs adds +1 Wound to the swarm's total health. The creatures will arrive immediately, crawling from every direction. They act on your initiative round in combat and obey your orders. They will disperse or wander off after a number of rounds equal to your Willpower Bonus.

Summon Wolves
Max: 1
You unleash a mighty roar that travels far and wide. With it, you summon wolves or dire wolves within hearing range with a Challenging (+0) Leadership Test. A number of wolves equal to your SLs or half that many dire wolves will be summoned from the nearby area. They will arrive in a number of rounds equal to half the units die of your Test. They act on your initiative round in combat and obey your orders. They will wander off after a number of hours equal to your Willpower Bonus.

Summon Storm
Max: 1
Once per day, you may take a Full Action to summon a storm. This storm will blot out the light for a mile radius around you and makes flying impossible. All missile attacks and Perception Tests are at -10. The storm lasts for a number of hours equal to your Willpower Bonus.

Swarm Form (Type)
Max: 2
Once per day, for a Full Action, you may turn your body into a swarm of tiny creatures. Any possessions will transform with you and be reconstituted when you turn back. Your swarm form will usually be a swarm of beetles, cockroaches, flies, rats or ravens, and the swarm will always take the same form. Whilst in this form, you cannot attack or be injured, although those attacking you will cause discomfort. You can fit through any space small enough for one of these creatures. This form lasts for a number of minutes equal to your Willpower Bonus. For a second purchase, you can become a swarm as a Free Action at any point before the end of your turn (even ahead of your usual place in the initiative order). This allows you to transform before an enemy can land a blow. You can purchase this Blood Gift afresh, as if it were a new Blood Gift, to take additional swarm forms.

Terrible Blows
Max: Strength Bonus
The minimum damage you deal in Melee, after Armour and Toughness Bonus, increases by +1 per level of this Blood Gift.

Tongue Attack
Max: Strength Bonus

You gain the Tongue Attack (+SB+1) Trait. The range is equal to your Ballistic Skill Bonus in yards. Each additional purchase increases the Damage and range in yards by one.

Tough Hide
Max: 1
Your flesh is like leather and your bones are like steel, allowing you to shrug off much of the effects of blunt trauma. You add your Toughness Bonus a second time when reducing incoming Wounds against weapons with the Pummelling Quality. If such an attack would normally ignore your Toughness Bonus, it only ignores your standard Toughness Bonus, not the additional bonus granted by this Blood Gift.

Transfixing Gaze
Max: 1
You may take a Full Action and engage in an Opposed Charm/Cool Test with anyone with whom you have line of sight. If you win, the victim counts as a Helpless Target for the next round. You may maintain this power over several turns, but your victim may attempt to break away once per turn.

Undying
Max: 1
You now have the Die Hard Trait.

Unhallowed Soul
Max: 1
You are immune to the warding influence of religious items and can easily enter religious spaces, such as churches and temples. Neither God nor Daemon can cow you. Blessed weapons still retain their effectiveness, however. This Blood Gift cannot be taken with Defy the Day, and vice versa.

Unholy Regeneration
Max: 1
You gain the Regeneration Trait.

Vagabond Knight
Max: 1
You no longer lose Advantage simply for being outnumbered. Your opponents still receive the usual modifiers to hit.

Vanguard
Max: 1
If you have a mount with the Stride Trait, you may make one free Run Action before anyone else acts. You still get your usual action on your usual Initiative turn.

Venomous Bile
Max: 3
You now have the Venom (Challenging) Trait. Each additional purchase increases the Difficulty to resist the Venom by one step.

Vomit
Max: 1
You gain the Vomit Trait.

Walking as the Wind
Max: 1
You may float or hover up to 2 yards above the ground. You gain the Hoverer Trait, and can move at your normal Movement speed. Water or barriers such as gates which you can hover over do not affect you.

Walking Death
Max: Toughness Bonus
If you wish, you may have a Terror Trait with a Terror Rating of 1. Each additional purchase increases your Terror Rating. This effect only applies when you choose.

Wallcrawler
Max: 1
You gain the Wallcrawler Trait.

Waterwalker
Max: 2
With a successful Challenging (+0) Cool Test, you may cross, wade through or swim across a body of water without taking damage or any ill effects. You must roll again for each new body of water or 100 yards of water crossed. Taking this Blood Gift a second time means you are completely immune to water and do not need to roll at all.

Wellspring of Dhar
Max: Initiative Bonus
You ooze Dhar energies. Any magic-users within Willpower yards of you, including yourself, may make Language (Magick) Tests on Dhar-based spells with extra SLs equal to your level in this Blood Gift. Any other magic cast within range is vulnerable to miscasts, even if the magic-user has Aethyric Attunement. This stacks with the Sources of *Dhar rule.

Wings
Max: 1
You can sprout leathery wings from your back. You gain the Flight Trait with a Rating equal to twice your Movement.

Wolf Form
Max: 2
For a Full Action, you may transform into a Doom Wolf (see Appendix). All Trappings and possessions are absorbed into your body and reappear when you reverse the transformation. Reversing the transformation also takes a Full Action but can be performed at any time. If you purchase this Blood Gift a second time, you may transform as a Free Action.

Wound Resistant
Max: 1
You are hardier than most. Critical Wounds do 2 fewer Extra Wounds to you, to a minimum of 1.

Undead Magic

Vampires are beings of foul Dhar. As such, they have a natural preference for the Lore of Necromancy, but also occasionally learn other Lores. When they use other Lores, they freely and dangerously intermingle any and all Winds of Magic, manifesting Dhar instead of the Lore's usual Wind. Such spells are twisted mockeries of what they should be. Creatures summoned with Produce Small Animal are always vermin, foul reptiles or hungry bats. Barkskin turns flesh to the blighted wood of a lightning-scorched tree. Fat of the Land gluts your allies with blood and squamous things that materialise in their bellies. Crown of Flame burns green and cold, like hellfire. The Lore of Light, however, is anathema to Vampires and can never be learned.

Undead magic is different to Chaos magic, even though both types use Dhar. Undead magic is typically less volatile and does not corrupt Vampires, who are already tainted in their own unique way. As such, Undead magic has some unique properties to the standard Dhar magic of Chaos Wizards.

Effects of Dhar

The Sources of *Dhar special rules from p.78 of the Enemy in Shadows Companion also apply to Vampires. In your Vampire's lair, all Channelling (Dhar) Tests gain +3 SLs. A graveyard or similar location might grant +2 to +3 SLs, depending on its size. A single grave might only confer a +1 SL bonus while you are in contact with its earth. Other than locations, you can get a +1 SL bonus provided you are within Willpower yards of an Undead swarm or pack, or a single Undead beast of Size (Large) or greater. The maximum bonus from Sources of *Dhar is +3 SLs.

Overcasting

Unlike Chaos Sorcerers, your static Undead nature means you still require +2 SLs for Overcasting, but you do not suffer from Minor Corrupting Influences. Your Vampiric nature resists the touch of Chaos. You never take mutations or Corruption as a result of Chaos, though the curse of Vampirism may wreak its own horrific disfigurements with time. This means you cannot make Dark Deals either.

Chaos Dice

A roll of an 8 on either die likewise does not affect you or your Undead minions, but the effects will instead transfer to any living beings within Willpower yards (see EiSC, p.78). This may include mundane beasts (wolves, vermin and bats) and Ghouls, as well as any Swains or living enemies. The effects cannot be directed and do not know friend or foe. This can be a terrible cost for Vampires whose mortal allies are destroyed too early, but the benefits of Dhar soon seduce Vampires to put such worries to the back of their minds.

Lore of Necromancy

Dhar is a dangerous and potent blend of the Winds of Magic only used by the foulest witches and sorcerers. Dhar infuses Necromancy, giving it potency, but it also prevents you from accessing the pure and distinct Winds of Magic of any other Lores. The effects of Dhar listed above apply to all Lore of Necromancy spells and replace the unique bonuses of any other Lores that you learn, even if you never learn Necromancy.

Additionally, any Undead creatures who are targeted by Arcane Spells from the Lore of Necromancy, but not any other Dhar-infused spells, lose all Fatigue and Bleeding Conditions after all other effects have been resolved.

Call Hellsteed
CN: 8
Range: Willpower yards
Target: Special
Duration: Instant
You open a chasm in the ground and raise a mighty Hellsteed from the earth. It takes the baseline profile for the Nightmare as well as the core Traits listed for the Hellsteed. Each +2 SLs add an additional Optional Trait of your choosing.

Control Wraith
CN: 7

Corpse Flesh
CN: 3
Range: Willpower yards
Target: 1

Curse of Years
CN: 14
Range: Willpower yards
Target: 1
Duration: Instant
You can point at a target and cause them to age rapidly. Humans age 20 years plus 5 for every +2 SLs. Halflings increase this rate of ageing by 50% (round up) while Dwarfs and Elves age at twice the rate of Humans, though a Dwarf's natural Magical Resistance still applies. This ageing can only be reversed by magical healing or Dispelling.

Deathly Domain
CN: 8
Range: Touch
Target: AoE (a single location)
Duration: Willpower days
A location you touch becomes haunted. The ghosts can do no real harm, but anyone who enters the location must roll against Terror 1 per day. The ghosts take a while to ramp up, but even the coolest minds find their presence disturbing. Anyone who sleeps at this location will gain +1 Fatigued Condition per night, which only resolves when they leave.

Fountains of Blood

CN: 10

Range: Touch
Target: 1
Duration: Willpower Bonus Rounds
You may examine the flesh of a recently departed creature or being (dead for less than a day) and receive visions among the entrails and blood. If you use the corpse of a sentient being, you may ask one question and the being's memories will reveal themselves to you in whichever manner the GM deems fit (visions, sensations, words or names, for example). The memories will be truthful, though limited by the being's own knowledge and recollection of the matter. For every +2 SLs on this Test, you may ask one additional question and receive an answer in the same fashion. Mortals who cast this spell on sentient beings must pass a Mental Corruption Test each time it is used, unless they have become particularly callous already. If you use animal remains, you may instead ask one question about the future; the answer will present itself as a prophecy or riddle.

This spell does not affect living animals or Swains under your command.

Life in Death
CN: 14
Range: You
Target: You
Duration: One month
The first step to true immortality, this spell allows you to depart your body after death and find another. If you are killed within a month, your spirit will wander the Hedge looking for a new vessel to inhabit. Provided you can find a living creature before sunrise, you may attempt an Opposed Leadership/Cool Test to possess them. For every +2 SLs on the casting roll, you gain +1 SL to your Leadership roll. If you succeed, you possess their body but do not have access to their memories or personality. If you fail, you must find a new host. If you fumble or dawn arrives, you are doomed to wander as a lost soul until or unless Rebirth in Blood is cast upon you. If you are ever forced out of the body, the dormant spirit of your host will reassert itself and you will die once again.

The creature will have all basic Traits and the Trained (Mount) Trait listed in its profile in the Appendix. You may choose one Optional Trait per +2 SLs.

Rebirth in Blood
CN: 20
Range: Willpower yards
Target: 1
Duration: Instant
You can resurrect Vampires, though it's a long and arduous process. This spell can only be cast at Geheimnistag. In the weeks running up to Geheimnisnacht Eve, you must take an Endeavour to gather the ingredients and complete the rituals required to prepare for this spell. You must also obtain the heart and brain of the Vampire, or their ashes, or the CN increases by +5. Once ready, you must visit a place of great tragedy, suffering or death under the full moons and place the remains in direct moonlight. You must then spill some of your own blood onto the remains, causing a minimum of 1 Wound, and make the required Channelling and Language (Magick) Tests. If you succeed, you revive the Vampire, who returns naked and Ravenous, but otherwise in full health. If you fail, you may try again in another location but must start the whole process from scratch. Mortals who cast this spell typically find themselves consumed by the Ravenous Vampire, though presenting them with a suitable sacrifice might give them enough time to get to safety while the returned beast quenches their thirst.

CN: 14
Range: Touch
Target: 1
Duration: Special
You may force possession of a living body by a malignant spirit. If you succeed, the target is possessed by a spirit which you may attempt to command by any means at your disposal. The target may make an Opposed Cool Test once per day at sunrise to regain control of their body, otherwise the possession lasts indefinitely. The spirit uses your Cool Skill for this Test. For every +2 SLs you roll on the initial casting attempt, the spirit gains +1 Advantage on the Cool Test which bleeds away at a rate of one per day. If you score +6 SLs, the possession is permanent. The target may spend a Fate Point immediately at the point of possession to repel the spirit and ignore this spell, but may not do so after this.

If your body is destroyed, you will likely return as a Cairn Wraith, but if even part of your brain or heart remains, you can reoccupy your body and perform any magic or Blood Gift which would restore it. You may return to your body at any time to end the spell, although your spirit will snap back to your flesh at the next sunrise.

Spirit Stealer
CN: 10
Range: Willpower yards
Target: Special
Duration: Instant
You cast a magic missile which deals +12 Damage, ignoring APs from light armour. It strikes its first target, dealing full Damage (minimum 1 Wound), before moving onto the next closest target and dealing +11 Damage (minimum 0 Wounds). It will continue to strike additional targets, dealing -1 Damage each time (minimum 0 Wounds), until it either fails to inflict any Wounds against a target or reaches 0 Damage. Each target killed by the missile has their soul torn from their body, and can be revived as a Zombie in future turns through the use of Necromancy.

Undead Unguent
CN: 4
Range: Touch
Target: Special
Duration: Willpower Bonus hours
You imbue a chalice of your own blood with Dhar. Any Undead creature which drinks the potion will regain your Willpower Bonus in Wounds but will be at -2 SLs in any Opposed Test against you for a number of hours equal to the Wounds healed. Ghouls can benefit from this draught, even though they are technically still living.

Range: Willpower yards
Target: AoE (Willpower Bonus yards)

You create a vortex of Dhar to attack your foes. It swirls around living foes, whipping them with darkness and howling screams from deepest Hell. This is a magic missile which affects all living beings within the Area of Effect. It causes +10 Damage that ignores Toughness Bonus and Armour Points and inflicts +1 Broken Condition upon all living beings affected.

Withering Wave
CN: 5
Range: Willpower yards

Wraithly Shroud
CN: 8

You can only be sensed or harmed by those who can affect the dead themselves. When the spell ends, your target will become corporeal again.

They are usually bedecked in the armour of their former status but have little to no flesh left on their ancient bones. Grave Guards and Black Knights are Wights with a few levels of the Guard or Knight Careers, usually with the Brute and/or Elite Traits and the Impale Quality added to all their Melee weapons. The greatest Wights are known as Wight Lords or Wight Kings and drain life with their very weapons (each blow counts as though a Bite with the Vampiric Trait, restoring Wounds to the Wight as they are inflicted on the victim). Wights may be mostly rotting flesh (like Zombies) or mostly bones (like Skeletons). If the latter, then they may be subject to the Dem Bones rule (p.327, WFRP 4e).

Hellsteeds are impressive (Elite) winged Nightmares (Flight 100) with armoured scales (Armour 5), hissing black blood (Corrosive Blood), improved natural weapons (Bite +9, Weapon +10) a stench of sulphur (Distracting) and terrible (Terror 1) bloodlust (Hungry). This confers the Trait Ward 6+ to their riders against non-magical attacks on any turn in which they have moved; the steeds themselves remain Ethereal whether moving or stationary. Skeletal Steeds are essentially the same but lose Ethereal (including the Ward effect on riders), gain Hardy, and follow the optional Dem Bones rules.

Beasts and Creatures
